THE UNIVERSITY OF ARIZONA

July 1, 2023, 10:00 a.m.

Dear Colleagues,

As of today, July 1, 2023, the University of Arizona Global Campus (UAGC) officially becomes part of the University of Arizona. Please watch this video for a welcome message and update from President Robbins, in which he shares his pride that we are taking this step together with a shared goal of providing greater access to higher education for a diverse group of working adults.

On behalf of President Robbins, we would like to thank the University of Arizona and University of Arizona Global Campus teams who worked to ensure our UAGC colleagues' transition goes as smoothly as possible.

Thank you.

Land Acknowledgment

We respectfully acknowledge the University of Arizona is on the land and territories of Indigenous peoples. Today, Arizona is home to 22 federally recognized tribes, with Tucson being home to the O'odham and the Yaqui. Committed to diversity and inclusion, the University strives to build sustainable relationships with sovereign Native Nations and Indigenous communities through education offerings, partnerships, and community service.
